In that sublime scene nature herself proclaimed the respect due to science and virtue. The accomplished scholar, the splendid philosopher, the unsullied statesman, whose name could shake a throne, whose eye gazed unmoved on mitres and sceptres and diadems, and whose giant reason stalked like a conqueror among the proudest of Europe s peers, the representatives of wealth, lineage and royalty, when brought before the representatives of the Letters of his country, this sovereign of genius and learning, a captive in the chains of his own emotions, remained as mute as the walls that surrounded him - a type of the homage...
