Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from An Address Delivered Before the Norfolk Agricultural Society: At Dedham, Sept; 29, 1859 Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is very true that I am not here to-day to attempt to give you any instruction in agriculture, scientific or practical; I have no claims to be heard upon such subjects, and I am very much afraid that if I should make the attempt you would all laugh at my farming. I understood very well when I was requested to address you upon the subject of which you have heard, that this day and occasion were not devoted solely to an interchange of experience and opinions upon the important practical questions, the old knowledge, the new lights, the experiments, the success, and the progress of agriculture. These, indeed, are among the foremost objects of your association, but there is a common ground where we can all meet to learn something from each other. There are other objects in this Society, there are other uses in agriculture, than the growing of corn merely. There are other lessons to be learned in the wide fields and the green meadows, than the art of the best soils, and manures, and crops. The country has other instructions than in thrift and good husbandry, and we shall do well to pause for a while, even in the bustle and excitement of a day like this, to interchange our thoughts upon the objects and uses, the influences, the ends, and the aims of this rural life - this home in the country which we can all share and enjoy, and by which, if we will, we can all be improved and elevated....
